Why is there a warning label for California residents on Caroma packaging?

This label is being attached in compliance with the California Safe Water Act of 1986. Many products sold in California are now or very soon will be carrying these labels, including plumbing and home products, tools and even supplements and food products. Caroma products meet all required standards for use in residential, commercial, hospitality or any other bathroom environment and are Watersense labelled.

So, if Caroma products meet all regulations, why do we still carry a warning label on our products? Prop 65 is an additional initiative that seeks to warn California residents of the presence of any substance, even in trace amounts that is known to the State of California to cause adverse health issues.

Does this mean that using our products will cause cancer or birth defects?

Even though a product may be found to contain a Proposition 65-listed chemical, it does not mean that use of the product will cause cancer, birth defects or other reproductive harm. Nor does it mean that a product is unsafe. Again, all Caroma products meet or exceed the requirements of all applicable product performance and safety industry standards. We are very confident that there is no health hazard associated with use of our products.

I do not live in California so why is my product being labelled?

Product supply chains can be quite complicated, meaning that we could sell to a distributor in one state which they in turn sell to an end consumer in another state. These warning labels are only required in the state of California. No other US state or Canadian province require similar labels and no federal laws require them. However, the only way to ensure that all product sold in California will be properly labelled is to label all product.
